

Results of John Example on Verbal Reasoning Test

The test assesses John Example's ability to understand, analyze, and make conclusions based on verbal information. The instrument requires reading comprehension of texts as well as coming up with inferences based on the data on hand. It assists in determining how successfully and effectively John Example would be able to understand and interpret information with varying degrees of complexity.

This report provides information about the results in a standard 10-point scale created after comparison with the results of a nationally represented sample of Bulgarians.

ANALYSIS OF VERBAL INFORMATION

Demonstrates very good ability to understand, analyze, summarize, and interpret verbal information. Possesses excellent ability to successfully handle activities and tasks involving evaluation of the content of written documents, text interpretation, intense business communication, free verbal and written interactions, making presentation, leading negotiations, etc.

Using the report

Personal decisions based on the test results should be made only by qualified professionals. This report should be considered only one of the possible sources of information. Efforts should be made to compare and supplement the data provided with other sources of objective information, such as work performance and results, other test and/or assessment center results, etc. This report contains personal information and should be stored in accordance with the law on personal data protection.